IMPIETY

Whether one be irreligious, non-religious, sectarian, non-sectarian, atheist, iconoclast, Buddhist, Mohammedan, Methodist, Catholic, or others, one blushes with shame that a woman can flaunt the name of Jesus Christ for the purpose of making money.

Aimee Semple McPherson, who again is on the front pages the past few days, is a golden dollar example of what religion is coming to today. She moves like a circus. She's a headliner wherever she goes. All that is lacking in the parade are the elephants. In the name of Jesus she calls upon her awe-stricken audiences to plunk down for the saving of souls. She's a red-headed virago against sin, but its mighty lucky she doesn't live in a glass house.

She feeds upon the religious discontent of the retired farmers who flock to southern California and have nothing else to do. She goes about saving souls at a dollar a soul, or $10, if she can get that much. Recently she has been sowing her doctrine in France and England where she knows business unrest will make those folk come to her flaming torch and dig up their last dollar that she may pay the expenses of her wonderful trip.

If there is such a thing as harlotry in religion, Aimee Semple McPherson is it. She is not only desecrating religion in the name of the dollar but she's making every minister wonder why he isn't a millionaire himself Tomorrow she starts for the United States after mopping up across the sea. And we suppose she will be welcomed back home with wild acclaim. Barnum was right, we guess.

TURKEY LONG ENJOYED

When Cortez, Spanish explorer, first broke bread with the early Aztecs, King Montezuma served wild turkey and Indian corn as outstanding viands at that banquet. Coronado found the cliff dwellers eating roast turkey as one of their favorite foods. The Zuni Indians of the Southwest have been familiar with turkey hunting for centuries. Some of their most ancient legends and traditions are built around this particular bird.

Fourteen British journalists have been studying America during the past month. No doubt they got the idea that our chief interests our politics and football.

Drinking of wood alcohol is being investigated by a Federal grand jury in New York. Our guess is that its finding will be that the habit is bad for one's system.

A very entertaining drama of the foolish gulf people place the enchanted world of fun where the girl enjoys life to
